School of Foreign Languages of Shanghai Jiao Tong University was formally established in 1997, and was granted the right to confer the professional degree of Master of Translation and Interpreting in 2007, as one of the first pilot units in the country.

The Master's degree of Translation and Interpreting aims to cultivate highly skilled translators who are proficient in English and Chinese and interdisciplinary talents with international vision. Professional curriculum highlights the practical ability of translation and the characteristics of Shanghai Jiao Tong University. A number of senior translators participated in the construction of it, they collaborated with the faculty of the Department of Translation to offer a series of courses such as "Workshop on International Publicity related Chinese-English Translation", "Introduction to International Organizations", and "Huawei Course Module".

The Department of Translation has joint master's degree programs with the Monterey Institute of International Relations in the United States, and the University of Melbourne in Australia. A number of students have received dual master's degrees to date. Graduates mainly work in government departments, international organizations, multinational enterprises, educational institutions, public institutions and so on, and some students go on to study at renowned universities overseas.
